Be Kind to Thy Husband.

BY MRS. B. ENOS.

Be gentle to thy husband, Remember, all day long, Amid the din and tumult He battles with the throng.

No wonder that the noble brow Grows clouded with the care That presses on his heart and hands While he is struggling there.

And when the night has gathered home
The loved one to his rest,
Be gentle—if no smile appears,
There's sorrow in the breast.

'Tis true, you miss the welcome voice Whose tones are always kind,
And long to raise the cloud that casts
A shadow on h.s mind.

Tay presence is not blest;
For, like the sunshine through the storm, It brings sweet thoughts of rest. And many times, when labor-tossed,

Yet, never fear, that through it all,

Thy gentle tones have come, And made glad music in his hea t, "Thanks be for thee--and home." Be sure, although he speaks it not, Thou art the star whose ray Makes life and love, and gildeth all

In life's dark rugged way. And so be ever gentle;
Kind words and deeds from the.
Do more towards making labor light

Than ever thou couldst see. MIDNIGHT MASS FOR THE DYING YEAR. Through woods and mountain passes

The winds like anthems roll; They are chanting solemn masses.
Singing.—Pray for this poor soul!
Pray! pray! Then, too, the Old Year dieth,

And the forests utter a moan. Like the voice of one who crieth In the wilderness alone, Vex not his ghost!—Longfellow.
